

UNIVERSITY OF THE ARMED FORCES - ESPE

Computer Science Department

Object Oriented Programming

36863

ConixCoffeeAndIceCreamShop - List of Possible Objects

LASCANO, JORGE EDISON

October 14, 2026

List of Possible System Objects

Client: The individual or entity who places an order within the system.

Order: Registers and tracks the details of an order placed by a client.

OrderDetail: Represents each specific item included in an order, along with its quantity and unit price.

Product: Refers to the available items offered on the menu.

Beverage (Bebida): A liquid product that requires specifications such as size, temperature, and sweetness level.

IceCream: Specific objects for ice cream products, including specifications for flavors, scoops, and extras.

Ingredient: Raw material used in recipes to produce menu items.

Recipe: Describes the required ingredients and step-by-step instructions needed to prepare products.

Supplier (Provider): An entity that supplies ingredients, packaging, and other operational materials.

Payment: Registers monetary transactions related to an order, including payment method and status.

Inventory: Tracks stock levels, expiration dates, and quantities of ingredients and supplies.

Packaging: Materials used to pack, contain, or serve products to customers.

Tax: Applicable tax rates or fees applied to products and transactions.

FinancialReport: A summary balance that records overall income, expenses, and net earnings.

Extra: Additional toppings or side items added to a base product (e.g., ice cream toppings).

Portion: Specifies the standardized serving size or quantity of a product or ingredient.

Utensil: Items such as forks, knives, spoons, and other tools used for product consumption.

Category: Groups related products together (e.g., Desserts, Cold Drinks, Ice Creams) for menu organization.

Employee: Represents staff members who process orders, prepare food, or manage store operations.

Shift: Tracks employee work schedules, hours worked, and assigned register duties.

Discount: Promotions or special offers applied to individual items or total order balances.

Invoice: Formal legal document generated for a transaction, detailing items, taxes, and customer tax data.

Table: Represents physical tables or dining locations within the establishment for dine-in orders.

PurchaseOrder: An order placed with a supplier to restock ingredients and packaging materials.